Town Agrees To Remove Bike Trail Fence

July 10, 2001 | By STEPHANIE REITZ; Courant Staff Writer

AVON — The town council has agreed to remove 11,700 feet of chain-link fencing along the Rails-to-Trails path in town.

Residents whose homes about the path had requested the move.

The fencing, which was installed years ago to ease the security and privacy concerns of some homeowners, is not needed after all and is unattractive, other neighbors told the town council recently.

FOR THE RECORD - Correction published July 17, 2001.

Chain-link fencing that currently lines part of Avon's Rails-to-Trails route will not be removed. At residents' request, the town council has decided that -- in the future -- other parts of the trail will be lined with split-rail wood fencing or no fencing at all, depending on the terrain. A story on Page B1 on July 10 incorrectly stated that the existing chain-link fencing would be replaced with wood fencing.

Proximity to the trail has been advertised as an attractive feature in many homes on the market, said Town Planner Steven Kushner.

“They feel the trail is really a significant asset,” he said.

Completing the final portion of the trail in Avon was delayed because of a sewer project, but it was finished over the past year, and the first layer of base pavement has been laid.

The final paving is expected to take place this fall, along with the possible addition of mile markers and other signage.
