

WELCOME TO CONNELLSVILLE

Connellsville is located on the banks of the Youghiogheny River, and once fueled the regional economy with its coke factories. The industry was so lucrative that Connellsville is believed to have once boasted more millionaires than any U.S. city of its size.

In the early 1900s, Connellsville was king of coal and coke, with beehive ovens lighting up the hillsides and rail lines and streetcars criss-crossing the city. The ovens can still be seen between miles 93 and 94 along the Great Allegheny Passage, although they may be difficult to locate when vegetation is lush.

The trail runs directly through Connellsville's West Side, formerly the town of New Haven. You will pass under a beautiful stone and stained glass crafted arch that is one of many public art installations along the trail. Next you will come upon the local historical society's re-creation of Crawford's Cabin and Spring House. Here you will find the first of 11 Heritage Trail Signs that you can follow on a two mile walk or ride to explore the city.

Crawford's Cabin and the Spring House are located in the newly renovated Yough River Park. From the park, you travel up Third Street, with one lane dedicated exclusively for the trail to enter a business district that contains a bike shop, a B&B, art glass shops, and other retail.

At the intersection of Crawford Avenue you can turn left and cross over the river to the city's traditional downtown. Here you will find the popular Bud Murphy's Pizza, El Canelo Mexican Restaurant, and the Amtrak stop.

Back on the trail and headed south to Ohiopyle, you will see Youghiogheny Opalescent Glass Factory, whose silos were also painted as part of the public art program along the trail.
