

WELCOME TO OHIOPYLE

Once known as Falls City, the town of Ohiopyle is surrounded by the beauty of the 20,500 acre Ohiopyle State Park that will satisfy any recreational interest. The Youghiogheny River Gorge, Ohiopyle Falls, Cucumber Falls, and Ferncliff Peninsula are just a few of the geologic features that drew tourists in the early days of railroad excursions and continue to draw visitors today.

The trail between Ohiopyle and Confluence was the first completed section of the Great Allegheny Passage in 1986. Heading in the other direction, toward Connellsville, you will find yourself pedaling over the Ohiopyle High and Low bridges. The High Bridge offers a commanding view of the Youghiogheny Gorge.

In town, a former train station serves as a visitor center. Sherman Street, just a few blocks in length, runs from the train station through the center of town. Local eateries, an ice cream shop, and outfitting shops are located here as well as on Negley and Garrett streets.

Be sure to visit the Ohiopyle-Stewart Community Center, a schoolhouse-turned-gathering place that hosts an array of activities from bingo to yoga to pancake suppers. Former school rooms along the side of the building are filled with a coffee shop, pizza shop, local craft wares, and a local foods specialty retail store.

Visitors come to the park year-round for biking, whitewater rafting, hiking, backpacking, cross-country skiing, and more. Nearby Fallingwater and Kentuck Knob are two of architect Frank Lloyd Wright's acclaimed works.
